The Beautiful Losers

The Beautiful Losers are a four piece Surrey-based band that play a very English take on the rock 'n' roll sounds of the American West Coast. Uncut magazine described them as "the sound of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young having a fight with The Who" and the Sheryl Crow band guitarist Peter Stroud simply proclaimed "that these guys rock". They have been together for the past four years and are currently finishing their second album with producers Rob Blackham (Massive Attack, Redwood, Cooper Temple Clause) and Al Stone (Bjork, Jamiroquai, Bob Dylan).
